SANDERS STYLE

Michelle Laury STAFF WRITER

As we all know, the 2021 presidential inauguration of Joe Biden happened Jan. 20. At the inauguration, we all absorbed the striking fashion looks and outfits that were worn. From Kamala's vibrant purple coat to Lady Gaga's fabulous designer dress, one person served the best looks: Bernie Sanders. He wildly outshined everyone there with his adorable and trendsetting recycled mittens.

Sanders was by far the bestdressed attendee of the presidential inauguration. The whole time, he looked fierce and ready to strut the runway.

Last spring, Mr. Brothers came out to play. During a golf practice at River Pines, he decided to play with the team. This was his chance to show why he was the golf coach.

The first two holes went by with the ball going left and right; but, on the third hole, he knew he needed to do something special. He walked up, put the ball on his tee, took a couple of practice swings, and used his baseball athleticism to knock the ball onto the green.

With twenty feet from him and the hole, all he had to do was two-putt, and he had a par.

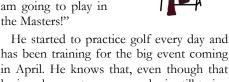

He hit his first putt to about three feet for the most important putt of his life. He walked up and hit the ball dead center. He went on the rest of the day, happy with his success.

What he did not know was that the chairman of the Masters was there-and, after seeing the great shot by Mr. Brothers, he thought that he might invite him to play . . . but then Covid-19 happened and the Masters was postponed. The chairman knew it would be weird to have an unknown player play in the middle of the Coronavirus, so he thought that March 2021 would be the perfect time to tell him.

Bionic Brady Andrew Couey

STAFF WRITER

Breaking news just came out after the biggest game of the year. It turns out, Tom Brady, six-time Super Bowl winner, is a robot. He was created by the Patriots back in the 1980s.

After a record of bad seasons, they thought, "In 20 years, we will have the best player in the world."

The report came out after Brady left New England for Tampa Bay and the Patriots lost their star.

In a recent press conference, a spokesperson for the Patriots said, "If we can't have Brady, then no one can!"

At this news of Brady's cyborg condition, many other teams have come out and said they feel robbed of Super Bowls. As well, many quarterbacks are saying their entire careers have been damaged by this.

In an exclusive interview with Peyton Manning, he said, "I would have had alltime passing yards for years if it were not for him."

As well, some are saying that, since Brady is not human, the many awards he has won for having the most passing yards should be given to other players.

As far as the Super Bowl is concerned, this leaves some unanswered questions. Will the other teams be given Super Bowl rings, and what will the punishment be for the Patriots and Tom Brady?

This has not been the first time teams have been mad at the Patriots. Back in 2015, it was uncovered that they were using deflated footballs, which did not affect cyborg Brady—but the other players were affected and the punishment was laughable. Brady was suspended for four games and those were at the beginning of the next season, and the Patriots' back up quarterback was still really good.

Crazier still, many people are calling for the extermination of robot Tom Brady.

The Patriots' entire organization might be shut down and another team might be created, which leads many to question how many other robot-athletes the Patriots have created?

It is up to the NFL to decide what happens next.

Patriots fans are divided into two groups—either you are "patriotic" or furious.

Because of the uproar, New England's coach, Bill Belichick (who could not be reached for comment), and the manager have both resigned, leaving the entire Patriots organization in shambles.

The Positives of TikTok

Kishan Patel STAFF WRITER

Fact: TikTok is one of the leading apps for making people smarter. A lot of people think that the app exists solely for foreign countries to gain access to your devices, but it is so much more than that—it's a lifestyle!

Everyone should join the famous app because it has so many positives.

First, it teaches valuable skills like dancing and lip syncing, alongside trends that won't bring me any good once I graduate college, if I can graduate college as a TikTok user.

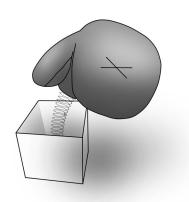

Also, learning all of these dances and staying on top of all these trends takes up so much of my time, I don't even have to worry about the petty things in life, like homework, school or my grades!

TikTok rules! It's the best pastime ever!

Also, TikTok can also be a great influence on me! This app really gets teens.

But I wanted to see what real people thought about this app. Freshman Ethan Spry is not a fan.

"Using TikTok is like not wearing a mask. Don't do it," he says.

I don't understand how he could say such bad things about the wonderful TikTok!

One more important point, Spry responded first with: "Do you want a negative or sarcastic comment?"

This must show how much people truly love this app. I can't think of any other way he could think!

In conclusion, download TikTok. It makes life better. It makes sure you spend all of your time on the app learning valuable skills and not doing annoying things like school because if you have TikTok then no amount of school is good enough for you!

Studies have been conducted, showing that the social media app TikTok is not addicting at all. Even though most concerned people in our society believe that kids spend too much time on the app and tech analysis have proven that people's "For You" page is designed specifically to keep the specific user scrolling, studies from a college that I cannot seem to name have proven otherwise.

These studies, from a university that is 100% real, shows that all this bogus reporting saying that TikTok is harmful to teens' brains and majority of Gen Z has a crippling addiction to the app is fake. This very very real and professional study shows that the app actually makes you smarter!

The very real leader of this study said, "Yup it's true! TikTok can only benefit youth and can only help your mental health and ego."

(For some reason I could not get this very real person's name).

I asked this study leader how much time they spend on TikTok per day, and they told me, "I spend about seven full hours a day on the app. I can physically feel TikTok benefitting my brain and thought process every day."

(Again, for some reason I could not get this person's name.)

I guess you learn something new every day. So, since you only get to live once, go spend 10 hours a day on TikTok!'

The world famous TikTokker Charli D'Amelio, with over 101 million followers, was recently injured in a TikTok accident. She dances to all the popular songs and leads the way for teenagers trying to do all the new moves. D'Amelio is a national celebrity and is known by everyone who has the app with over a billion downloads. She was even in a Super Bowl commercial. She is "EXTREMELY" driven and works very hard to memorize the dances that have made her millions of dollars.

A common move, "the woah"—where you put both hands out and rotate the right arm under the left—is used in many dances and even video games. Well, this dance move caused D'Amelio much pain. She has done the dance hundreds of times, enough where she could do it in her sleep.

But, on April 1st, it caused too much strain on her arm. Her right arm came out of the socket! Sadly, she could do the

In our exclusive interview with D'Amelio, she said, "The long, tiring work of having to dance in front of my phone once a day became too much. My body could not take it anymore."

TikTok has now issued a warning on the app to warn people on the potential risk of injury.

Since her TikTok mishap, she now sits in her mansion in LA waiting for her arm to heal. She has to suffer through not being able to dance with her arm in a sling.

She says, "It's a lot harder to drive my custom Tesla, only being able to use one arm. I can only do videos that do not use my arm and vlogs of my every day."

During her resting period, she has only had the energy to write a book, be the voice actor in an animation movie and gett her own reality TV show. Even with her injury, she has found other things to do. Just like an injured sports player, she looks forward to the next season of millions of teenagers watch her dance for fifteen seconds.

Germans typically have very strong accents; so, when they say certain words, sometimes they sound funny to Americans. This is because the German alphabet and English alphabet are similar, but there are a few letters and combinations of letters that sound quite different.

For example, a "V" in German is pronounced like an American "F." This is illustrated as the word "father" sounds similar in both languages but, in German, it is spelled with a V, "Vater".

Having grown up in a household with native English- and German-speaking parents, the Gerdes kids have had many oppor- Mercedes-Benz tunities to hear the differences when pronouncing the same words in different lan- • guages.

Here are a few of their favorite brands that Americans can hardly recognize when pronounced by Germans:

- Birkenstocks (BeeR-KeN-sToKs)
- Hugo Boss (Who-go-BOss)

- Tag Heuer (TaHG-HoYer)
- Adidas (Aadie-DASs)

Did you give the German phonetic pronunciations above a try? Well, you should, because they are actually all German brands and this is the proper way to pronounce them!

The Gerdes's Aupair, Lisa, told her parents about her first trip to the Adidas outlet store.

"I still remember laughing each time I heard the employees mispronounce the brand name. It sounded so strange!"

Being able to speak German, the Gerdes kids know how to pronounce these words both ways-but, sometimes they choose to say them incorrectly to their German Vater just to annoy him. His immediate response is to correct them, but then he realizes they were just trying to give him a hard time.

This always results in him saying," Höre auf!" This means, "Stop!" in English.

So, just remember, if you ever travel to Europe, specifically Germany, that you'll be the one that they're laughing at if you say these brands the American way!

On Jan. 14, Logic's record label, Bobby Boy Records, announced the new signing of rapper Doctor Destruction (more commonly known as Doc D) on their Instagram account. Releasing his debut album, Planetory Destruction, only 8 days after, Doc D has already made a decent impact, getting 164 thousand views as of writing this.

Logic said in an Instagram post that he met Doc D three years ago in Chicago and "Now he claims to be from the year 2097."

So, time travel does exist. Who cares? What really matters is this album.

Without further ado, here's my review.

This totally true and factual story of Doc D's adventures through the cosmos is a very eve-opening experience. Using commercials and radio interviews from the year 2097, Doc D displays the reason why he is on a planetary rampage, being his separation from his girlfriend Sharon, explained in Track 8: "Cosmos 105.7 (Skit 2)."

Track 2: "Planetory Destruction" (feat. Big Lenbo)

First off, the beat is absolutely fantastic. It Castro) is very MF Doom inspired and captures his style perfectly.

He killed it on this track. 10/10

Track 17: Death of Destruction

While including a very well-produced beat, Doc D includes a recording intertwined with it of the Cosmos 105.7 broadcast. The broadcast is the hosts Buck and Kyle watching the destruction of Doc D's ship being shot at by bounty hunters. Neither host can believe what is happening. Bounty hunters from all across different galaxies and multiple dimensions trying to destroy his ship has them both in awe. When all seems lost for Doc D, he escapes.

All in all, there isn't much to say about Doc D's album except that it is very good. Each beat has so much energy and every lyric is crafted nicely. However, I think the bigger thing to realise is that Doc D has escaped to our world, our time, our universe, and lives among us now.

As many of you know, recently GameStop stock has exploded in value. It went up around 3,000%, and people all around the world freaked out. The reason this happened is because a big corporation, Wall Street, bet money that GameStop stock would go down. A bunch of people on social media app Reddit discovered this, and then they all decided to invest money in GameStop so that Wall Street would lose money.

The reason they had for trying to mess up Wall Street, they said, is because the people on Wall Street are just billionaires exploiting the stock market, and it's not fair to the average person.
